NEW DISCOVERIES

NEW FINDS and DATE SPECIFICATIONS FOR "ASPHALT JUNGLE" MGM/TV series:

First an acknowledgement: The information in regard to this series is due to the excellent research of Mr. Jonathan D. Burlingame. Jonathan is hard at work on his forthcoming book, which will be devoted to a study of the original musical soundtracks composed especially for dramatic television series. A number of excellent scores were composed for these series, and very little information is available, since these films are either lost or difficult to come by. I supplied Mr. Burlingame with copies of the two episodes of "Asphalt Jungle" in my collection, and he in turn provided me with the following material.

Dr. Stratemann will be interested to see the "Daily Music Report" (see below) which now confirms that Duke Ellington and his Orchestra recorded soundtrack music for "Asphalt Jungle" on 25 Apr 60.

As Dr. Stratemann's book indicates, the TV series commenced on 2 Apr 61. The Ellington soundtrack music was intended for the "pilot" episode: THE LADY AND THE LAWYER. However, MGM evidently decided that a different episode, entitled "The Burglary Ring" had greater impact. So the series began to air on 2 Apr 61 with the "Burglary Ring" which was not the "Pilot" episode. The musical soundtrack on "The Burglary Ring" is a mixture of bits and pieces from the Ellington recordings and Calving Jackson conducting the MGM studio orchestra. This mixture of music, was apparently true of all subsequent episodes in the series. Now, the "Pilot" episode, which is all music by the Ellington orchestra, was aired on 9 Apr 61.

Burlingame matched the "Daily Music Report" with THE LADY AND THE LAWYER episode, as he watched it. So I believe we can now confirm that this one episode is entirely by the Ellington orchestra.

The following is a copy (diminished) of the "Music Log" for that episode, which plainly shows that it was indeed aired on 9 Apr 61.

Jacobs

The Daily Music Report and Cue sheets for the "Asphalt Jungle" TV series, establish that Ellington's prerecordings (with "Duke Ellington conducting his own 17 piece orchestra") were made 25 Apr 60. These are not the same as the Columbia recordings. Lasker

AN OTTO PREMINGER FILM
NEW DISCOVERIES

NEW FINDS and DATE SPECIFICATIONS FOR the "ANATOMY of a MURDER":

TV soundtrack scholar Jonathan D. Burlingame was kind enough to forward the Daily Music Report and Cue sheets for the "Asphalt Jungle" TV series, (...) (see elsewhere this bulletin). He was also kind enough to obtain for me, from ASCAP, the cue sheet to "Anatomy of a Murder." (I wish I had had it a couple of years ago - Klaus could have used it!) The titles are a bit different from how they appear on the soundtrack LP.

(The Cue Sheet #18,596 - dated July 10, 1959):

1	Main Title and Opening (4:32)	BKG INST ENT
2	Piano Impressions #1 (2:10)
3	Telephone (1:19)	VIS INST ENT
4	Telephone (continued)	BKG INST ENT
5	Good Morning Maida (1:15)	BKG INST ENT
6	Laura and Huff (:50)	BKG INST ENT
7	Phonograf Jazz (:49)	BKG INST ENT
8	Gun Racks (2:05)	BKG INST ENT
9	Who's Mary (1:25)	BKG INST ENT
10	Who's Mary (continued)	BKG INST ENT
11	Pie Eyes Blues (1:10)	BKG INST ENT
12	More Blues (2:01)	BKG INST ENT
13	Lonely Laura (2:20)	BKG INST ENT
14	Lonely Laura (continued)	BKG INST ENT
15	Sunday (:09)	BKG INST ENT
16	Slow - Canada (:30)	BKG INST ENT

19	Mary (3:45)	BKG INST ENT
20	Mary (continued)	BKG INST ENT
21	Piano Impressions #2 (2:37)	BKG INST ENT
22	Londonderry Air (Arr DE) (:14)	BKG INST ENT
23	End Title (2:14)	BKG INST ENT

I compared the soundtrack album, and the various cue seem to correlate as follows:

- 1 Main Title and Anatomy of a Murder (piano tag is truncated on Lp)
- 2 piece not on Lp
- 3 piece not on Lp
- 4 Flirtibird
- 5 Way Early Subtone
- 6 Flirtibird
- 7 Dixieland piece not on Lp
- 8 Hero to Zero
- 9/10 Low Key Lightly
- 11 Happy Anatomy (P.I. Five version on Lp's side 2)
- 12 Happy Anatomy (P.I. Five version not on Lp)
- 13/14 Almost Cried
- 15 Sunswept Sunday
- 16 wa-wa brass cue not on Lp
- 17 cue not on Lp?
- 18 Happy Anatomy (Big band version on LP's side 1)
- 19/20 Haupe
- 21 piano version of Flirtibird, not on Lp
- 22 Londonderry Air, not on Lp
- 23 Upper and outest

(Note: Two tracks on the Lp don't appear on the soundtrack -- Midnight Indigo and Grace Wallse.)

I'm doing my best to get the recording files out of Columbia Pictures, but it's taking forever. (One of these days, maybe.) Lasker

HOEFSMIT

You who are lucky enough to possess Stratemann's "Day by Day/Film by Film" should in connection with the above consult pages 403 through 413! For those not having this excellent work, we would like to pass on a few things:

- The preview version of the film did run for 160 mins
- The subsequent showing time runs for 110 mins
- A row of "working titles" are listed
- "Pie Eye's" (=Pie Eye = Ellington) Blues, version not included in the "sound track" LP, was in reality just a free-for-all, swinging adaption of "Flirtbird". You can find it included in the "Blues in Orbit" (2Dec59) LP.

Take a good look through all the details and aspects forwarded by Klaus, they are numerous, and there are plenty pictures to behold. While on the subject, you can see DEMS80/3-3; 81/3-2; 82/1-M6; 85/1-8 and 86/1-3.

Since we have not yet encountered the Columbia listings with mx identifications, we are so far unable to clarify the full picture of film respectively LP representations. Maybe someone of you have additional knowledge/facts. If so let us all know.

THEATRE

happens to his family, his friends, his career and future?

The Sagittarius Production from Cinerama Releasing Corporation which opens.....at the.....theater, stars

Raymond St. Jacques, Leslie Nielsen, Susan Oliver and Janet MacLachlan, with Donnelly Rhodes in a featured role. It was directed by Emmy Award winner Robert Stevens and co-produced and co-authored by Seeleg Lester and Richard Wesson. Duke Ellington has written an exciting original score for the film.

Raymond St. Jacques, who has quickly established himself as one of the leading black actors of today in such films as, "The Comedians" with Taylor and Burton, "The Pawnbroker," "If He Hollers, Let Him Go," and "Up Tight," plays the most challenging role of his career. He is David Rowe, brilliant district attorney who, as a result of a brain transplant operation to save his life, must begin a new life with the body of a black man.

Susan Oliver portrays St. Jacques' wife in the film. She has appeared in such films as, "Your Cheating Heart," "Butterfield 8," "The Disorderly Orderly," and on practically every leading TV series, including her appearance as a regular on the long-running "Peyton Place."

Leslie Nielsen who plays a bigoted sheriff on trial for his life, has been appearing in films and on TV for 22 years. This particular role is a favorite of his, as he prefers to play character parts such as "the heavies."

Janet MacLachlan, a rising new star, is featured as St. Jacques' first wife; the wife who was married to him before the brain transplant.

Director Robert Stevens won an Emmy for his Alfred Hitchcock Presents drama, "The Glass Eye." He has previously directed such films as, "The Big Caper," "Never Love a Stranger," and "In the Cool of the Day."

Seeleg Lester and Richard Wesson make their debuts as producers and film collaborators with "Change of Mind." Both have written extensively for radio and television.

Henry S. White, president of Sagittarius Productions, took on the extra role of executive producer because he felt "Change of Mind" was the most important and timely script he had read in years.

"Change of Mind" offers us the possibilities of tomorrow. It is the film for today.

SYNOPSIS

David Rowe (RAYMOND ST. JACQUES), a white liberal, recovers from a brain transplant operation with no serious complications, except the massively difficult readjustment period in his career and in his life. His wife Margaret (SUSAN OLIVER), though sympathetic to his recovery, finds herself unable to fully accept him as her husband. He has a black body. The operation is over and reporters are huddled in the hospital waiting-room for news of whether it is a success. They want to know what he is now; a white man in a black body...or a black man with a white brain. The doctor answers, "David Rowe is what he always was--a human being." Once Rowe is recovering at home, a medical report states: "...since the brain of David Rowe survives--the brain which reasons, has compassion, personality, loyalties and love, which has memory, instinct and sentience--then David Rowe, district attorney of Dorene County, survives--medically and legally." Rowe's mother, Angela Rowe (COSETTE LEE), has trouble accepting the change

I recently had the good fortune of acquiring the original Pressbook for the film "Change of Mind." (A Pressbook is provided to theatre operators to assist them in exhibiting a film.)

The following may be of some interest to members. The advertisement is a reproduction (diminished) of the large poster which appears in the front or lobby of the theatre which exhibits the film. I have not so far been able to obtain the original poster (known as a "onesheet").

ANNOUNCEMENT STORY

"Change of Mind" is the story of the world's first brain transplant.

A transplant from the brain of a white man into a black man's body.

It is a film as timely as today's headlines and dares to answer difficult questions after the transplant. Who is he? Is he black or white? What in her son. Near the end of his recovery, Rowe's assistant, Roger Morrow (DONNELLY RHODES), brings him his first case. The town's bigoted sheriff (LESLIE NIELSEN) has been charged with savagely murdering a young Negro girl. Rowe immediately returns to work despite pleas by his party's political boss Bill Chambers (JACK CRELEY) to leave well enough alone. Rowe also refuses an order by the State Governor (JOSEPH SHAW) to drop the case. Frustrated by the political pressure being exerted upon him, and because his wife cannot accept him fully as her husband, Rowe seeks out Elizabeth Dickson (JANET MACLACHLAN), wife of the man whose body he has received. Although he has visited her before and tried to offer help, this visit is different. He finds her singing in a nightclub and becomes embroiled in a fight with her boss, then takes her home. She is attracted to him and he, frustrated by his own wife's rejection, begins to make love to her, but she cannot accept him. Chambers still insists Rowe's name will not be placed on the party roll for the coming election because of his color. Rowe lashes into his case against Sheriff Webb. He produces some extraordinary evidence and the result is suspenseful and climactic. How he proceeds with the case and the surprises he uncovers affects not only the life of the man on trial, but David's own life, his marriage and his entire political and personal future.

NEW FIND concerning the "Check and Double Check" RKO film feature

A word about the music that the Ellington orchestra recorded at the RKO studios for "Check and Double Check." Apparently it was the policy of RKO to utilize its musical recordings in other films that it produced. I recently acquired a video tape of a 1931 RKO dramatic film entitled "The Lady Refuses." It stars Betty Compson, John Darrow, and Gilbert Emery. In this film, there is a "party" sequence, lasting approximately two minutes wherein the Ellington orchestra plays "Three Little Words." (There is no vocal, and I don't believe it is included in "Check and Double Check."). There is considerable dialogue above the music, and I doubt that it constitutes much of a "find." However, it does suggest the possibility that additional Ellington music might turn up on other RKO films that were released in 1931. In any event, should a member of DEMS wish to obtain the film, it is obtainable from VIDEO YESTERYEAR, Box C-137, SANDY HOOK, CT 06482, U.S.A. Price is USD 20.00.

*) Perhaps I should clarify that the Duke Ellington orchestra does not appear in "The Lady Refuses." The "party" sequence contains only background music on the soundtrack, evidently left over from recordings made for "Check and Double Check."

DISCUSSIONS - ADDITIONS - CORRECTIONS

● DE in concert, piano solo & orchestra, Düsseldorf-Oostende, 1970 (The "Jazz" Collection JCD 05, It)

From one of my dear Italian friends, I received recently this beautiful CD. It contains a very well recorded piano-recital, claimed to be from Düsseldorf, July 9-10, 1970 and a Medley with the full band, claimed to be from Oostende, August 1, 1970.

The recital is so beautiful that I was eager to believe that we have here a recording, made at the private party in Schmalenberg (in the vicinity of Düsseldorf) on 10Jul70. But when I saw that Duke played Paris Blues in Paris on 2Jul70, I wondered why he did have so much trouble to remember the melody 8 days later.

When I read in MIMM, page 141 that he did the Parisian programme ad lib, I wondered how he could have done almost an identical programme on the 10th in Germany.

After comparing the recordings, it became clear that we have here a great, although not complete (stereo) recording with a few additional titles from the session DESOR 1269, which has never been issued before. The liner-notes are not correct. These are the true selections: Little African Flower; Carolina Shout; Take The "A" Train; Black Beauty; Warm Valley; Things Ain't What They Used To Be; first attempt to play Paris Blues; New World A-Comin'; two more "takes" of Paris Blues; Come Sunday and Lotus Blossom.

The Medley has been easily identified because Lil Greenwood did Solitude and the introduction to It Don't Mean A Thing is longer than normal as meticulously described in DESOR 744 for the first concert in Paris on 20Sep59. This Medley is issued on LP BYG 2036 and on CD Affinity AFF 777. It is missing on the CDs Object Original Recording (E) OR-0022 (DEMS 87/4-4) and The Collection OR-0022 (DEMS 88/2-3).

Also in this case the liner notes contain many errors, but there can be no problem in recognizing the selections. Hoefsmit

● Mr. Stanley <dance wrote that 'Ocht O'Clock Rock' ought to be corrected to 'Ocht O'Clock Rock'. He claims that 'och' is a common Scottish exclamation that Duke very well may have encountered. However, if the copyright registration read 'Ocht', then this is the spelling that should be used in publication. Nielsen

● DEMS94/2-9, below (Portaleonis question): I never heard of unknown titles from Colgate University, May 1964. Nielsen

● NYC, Museum of Modern Art, Feb62.... Could it be that the recordings are identical with 4Jan62? Nielsen

● An N- copy of the Queen's Suite (a Columbia pressing with the six tracks in mono on one side, and in stereo on the other) is currently being offered at auction. The auctioneer claims (I don't know the source of his info) that four copies were pressed, only one of which was presented to the Queen, and two of which are untraced. I know the auctioneer (Leon Leavitt) and will be sure to get photocopies of the labels and details of wax data if not the disc itself, which I wouldn't mind owning, although the minimum bid is pretty scary: USD 2,000.00!

The Blu Note notes states "Cotton Tail" as from 22 Oct 71. If that is cor-

Let's Hear It for Mrs. Clinkscales

In his Music Is My Mistress, Duke names a Mrs. Clinkscales as his boyhood music teacher. Given his fondness for wordplay, the question of an actual Mrs. Clinkscales has persisted. In a recent issue of the DEMS Bulletin, Benny Åsland tells of recovering in his files an old note to the effect that an informant told him that this was a Mrs. Kingsdale, called "Mis'Klinker" by Duke. If this is true, then Duke likely issued the name for his amusement and posterity's wonderment. In a response in the next/current issue, Charles Waters, Jr. argues for a Mrs. Clinkscales, citing Mark Tucker's dissertation (which led to his superb Ellington: The Early Years), items from the defunct Washington Bee newspaper, and other factors.

All of this prompted me to begin poking around in basic genealogical sources—telephone directories, city directories, federal censuses, and oral history—with the following results. First, about Kingsdale and similar names: The 1907-13 Washington telephone directory has none of these names, but has several Clinkins. The same applies for Boyd's City Directory for 1899, 1905, 1910-11 [some years are missing in the National Archives' collection]. The same applies also for the 1900 and 1910 Washington censuses. Now about Clinkscales: The 1907-13 telephone directory lists no Marion or Marietta Clinkscales. Of the available city directories, the 1907 edition lists a Marion Clinkscales, lawyer, 739 4th Street, NW. The 1909 edition lists a Marietta L. Clinkscales, teacher, at the same address. With the possible exception of the middle initial, her name is the same as that of music teacher Marietta (Mrs. M. Harvey) Clinkscales identified by Tucker. The 1910 edition lists lawyer Marlon T. Clinkscales, but no Marietta. Interestingly, this same 1910 edition lists John W. Clinkscales, police [sic], at 810 12th Street, NE. This is next door to 812, where U.W.'s older brother until his death in the 1980s lived and had a barber shop. (U.W. [for Uncle Wesley] is the source I cited during a presentation at "Ellington '94" as a member of Duke's boyhood social circle and friend of Artie Whetsol (continued next line) and others associated with Duke. At age 95 he is remarkably active physically and sharp mentally.) When I recently asked him about Clinkscales at 810 12th Street, U.W. vaguely remembered them as very light complexioned but did not go so far as to positively identify them by race. Further, this Clinkscales address is in the immediate neighborhood of the church where Whetsol's step-father was pastor and where U.W. grew up. As to censuses, although no Clinkscales show up in the 1900 and 1910 Soundex indexes (the 1900 and 1910 list several Clinkins), the 1920 census enumerates Clinkscales at various addresses: Arthur P.; Julia Clinkscales [sic]; Samuel L., with wife Marie and children; and a John W., white, 42, [occupation] police, with wife M. Blanche and two daughters. This 1920 listed John W. and family are at 310 7th Street, NE, not far from 810 12th where the 1910 city directory lists a John W.

While my preliminary findings are certainly inconclusive, they suggest support for the research of those inclined to believe there was an actual Mrs. Clinkscales who taught Duke. Anyhow, I hope there was. Such a name deserves a confirmed place in the Ellington mystique.

Hudson
(From the TDES Chapter 90 Jan95 Newsletter)

I've purchased a CD, "Ella Fitzgerald - So Danco Samba" on a label called Jazz Birdie's of Paradise". The content consists of two portions, as follows: "Ella Fitzgerald with Duke Ellington Orchestra Bruxelles 22.2.1966: Satin Doll/Hey Little Girl/Somethin' To Live For/Let's Do It/Sweet Georgia Brown/Midnight Sun/How High The Moon/Just Lucky So And So/So Danco Samba/MackThe Knife; Ella Fitzgerald at Newport Jazz Festival Newport 1957: Too Close For Comfort/Just One Of Those Things/Lullaby Of Birdland/Tenderly/I Can't Give You Anything But Love/Airmail Special.

For 22Feb66 I found another Duke performance in Leeds, England, given in Timmer, Voloté, and Nielsen's books. Is it really Duke's orchestra behind Ella? I can't hear anything typical Duke. Are my ears that bad??

Wallén

Your ears serves you well. My files says the 22Feb66 portion to be correct as performed in Brussels, Belgium. The event took place at the Théâtre Américain, "Duke & Ella Concert". The CD has the full Ella portion with Jimmy Jones directing the orchestra, and with Joe Comfort and Gus Johnson added, replacing Joe Lamb and Sam Woodyard. Duke is not present, and the orchestra arrangements are not by him either. The titles are in some cases slightly distorted. As far as I can see Nielsen is correct for the 22Feb66 statements, the above mentioned Ella portion correctly omitted, and the same goes for Volonté and Timmer. Finally: Duke did not participate during the 1957 Newport Jazz Festival.
